Fire Fans Rush to Mishicot But There Is No Fire

Somewhere, somehow a rumor started in the city and county Tuesday night that a fire had razed the opera house in Mishicot. And how it spread.

As a result motorists flocked to the village yesterday. But the big red fire wagons in Mishicot and vicinity were never out of the fire houses. Villagers' telephones clanged as friends began calling up to learn about the fire. The taverns in the village did a rushing business.

Today everything is back to normal. Sept 17th 1948
